

Patty Kellerhals: Transcript

My name is Patty Kellerhals

and I am responsible for the core retail segment of the company's business, which is really consumers.

My title is Executive Vice President Director of Core Retail.

I had early in my career worked for a very small bank and was able to do almost everything you can imagine in a bank, so I got exposure and experience with a wide array of things.

Moved then into the next stage, which would've been the traditional branch banking.

I did things from Teller to New Account Desk to branch management responsibilities and then sort of the third stage of the career was moving into more strategic and administrative kind of roles. Started with leading a major project for the organization to automate activities in our branches, progressed into running our infrastructure and our channels outside of the branch. Including ATMs, the Call Center the introduction of the online banking the website, digital banking, and then most recently, being responsible for running the strategy for all of consumer banking.